Dance of Life Ends in Death

Reinforced Army Occupies Lini, Key City of Shantung

Shantung Army of Japan Wins After Day of Street Fighting

SPAIN IS BOMBED

Rebels Attack Federal-Controlled Mountain Pass to France

By the Associated Press
After 24 hours of sanguinary street fighting Japan's reinforced Shantung army completely occupied Lini Thursday. The Chinese high command announced withdrawal of their forces from the town, which is the key point of their Yi river entrenchments. The Chinese took up new defense positions two miles south. In Spain the insurgent besiegers drove deeper into suburban Madrid, taking advantage of troop transfers to Spain's Mediterranean front.

Rebel Bombers Strike PERPIGNAN, Franco-Spanish Border.—(AP)—Spanish insurgent airmen Thursday bombed towns and troop concentrations on one of the principal railways of northern Catalonia in a drive to smash the remaining land links between Catalonia and France. Seven civilians were killed and 20 injured at Puigcerda, Pyrenees mountain gateway from France to Catalonia. The Catalonia railway runs to the frontier through one of the border passes still under government control.

Rebels Take City HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier).—(AP)—General Franco's Catalan troops, in a surprise attack Wednesday night, captured Alboacera, the government field headquarters for northern Catalonia province. Alboacera is only 25 miles north of Castellon de la Plana, the largest coastal city between Valencia and Tarragona. Insurgent dispatches said two main columns and inland highways while the Gallician troops captured the hamlet of Turig and then moved across the fields to Alboacera. They fell on the latter from the northwest, finding only a small garrison which quickly surrendered or fled into the hills.

Launch New Drives Unyielding resistance from the foothills of the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean sea at Tortosa Wednesday forced insurgent General Franco to send new drives against two main objectives. Targets were Puigcerda on the French border in Catalonia and Castellon, Mediterranean seaport south of Catalonia. Bitter fighting raged on both the sunbaked seaboard and the snow-covered Pyrenees mountain passes. Columns composed of mixed units of Italian and Spanish troops backed by many batteries of field artillery blasted their way toward Castellon down the seaboard highway from Penicola, 35 miles to the northeast and along the inner highway from Salsadella, only 10 miles north of Alboacera. Their main objective was to cut the road between Alboacera and Valencia and their eventual goal was to take Castellon, one of the richest cities on the eastern coast.

To Hold Castellon Against this southern rebel army, Gen. Jose Malla, new military dictator of the major part of government Spain, rushed the finest units of his command, drawing men from Madrid, Toledo, and Southern fronts. Government sources said that Solchaga's army numbered less than 15,000 but were far better equipped and disciplined than the government forces. All of his veteran mountain men were sent down the snowy passes. Calvarymen guarded the flanks of this force felling its way toward the Andorran frontier. Other insurgent troops based at Sort, 18 miles west of Seo de Urgel, were trying to drive a wedge to the south and follow the usual insurgent tactics of surrounding a point rather than attempting a frontal attack.

Good Homes Tour of Hempstead to Be Held April 28

Citizens Invited to Meet at City Hall at 1 in Afternoon

INSPECT 5 HOMES

Tour Will End at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson Here

Plans are complete for the County Wide Better Homes tour which will be held on Thursday afternoon, April 28, according to Miss Melba Billington, county home demonstration agent, and Mrs. George Warr, tour chairman.

The group making the tour will meet at the city hall in Hope at 1 o'clock. There will be five stops.

The first will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Darwin on the Washington-Hope road. The total cost of this home, including the land, materials, and labor, was approximately $2,500. The house has five rooms, bath, a hallway, and two porches. Special attention is to be called to the hardwood floors in the living room and dining room and to the wiring and light fixtures. The house has 31 outlets with the wiring and fixtures costing $88.00. The bath room fixtures and toilet tank cost $250.

The second place will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Hill, in the Spring Hill community. This house consists of four rooms, two porches and bath room space. The total cost was $900. This included all new lumber, labor and all materials. Lumber from an old house was used in the building of the new house. The house is on a continuous masonry foundation. The hills value their home at under $2000.

The third stop will be at the two new houses at the Experiment Station.

The fourth stop will be at the log house of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Martin in the Hopeville community.

The tour will end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson, 810 South Main street, where the group will see the formal garden of Mrs. Anderson and later be served with refreshments by the hostess.

The purpose of the tour is to show by example the benefits of well planned and well arranged homes. The use of native materials is demonstrated in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill and of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Martin.

When the United States was young and unimmature, unrestricted this was a fertile field for the skilled craftsmen of Europe. But that generation has died and immigration today is practically prohibited.

And although ours is commonly reported to be the most mechanically-minded nation on earth it is a fact that fewer and fewer American youth take up machines as a livelihood.

This is regrettable. The man who "cracks" the front office is staking his career on his ability to reach the top or near-top. If his talent finally leaves him in the ranks of office workers then both his earnings and his station in life are considerably below even the lower-end of mechanical men.

And the reason for this is perfectly obvious. A trade teaches a man something the world has not to have. The machine man brings something of himself to every job that occupies him. But office work is a routine that beginners are quickly taught and the rewards don't begin in a position where he is entrusted with the shaping of policies, which means management or proprietorship.

The white-collar field is so limited, and the mechanical field so vast and well-paid, that it is difficult to understand how a new generation of Americans could lose their ancestors' reputation for being smart.

Railroad Crisis Is Big Problem

Roads Have Been Through Seven Panics Since 1837

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON.—If you can't make head or tail of that railroad crisis the President tossed at Congress the other day, consider yourself.

Some of the world's ablest financiers and the cream of railroad geniuses have been trying to solve one railroad crisis after another for more than a hundred years.

It's a wonder the railroads are still with us.

They have competed with each other ruthlessly; they have been hit by competition from buses, automobiles, trucks, airplanes, pipelines and electric power lines.

They have been in seven financial panics since 1837, with investors bearing the brunt each time.

They have borne regulation—good, bad and indifferent from 48 states and the federal government.

Through the years, taxes and labor costs have soared; today the railroads are paying annually $240,000,000 in taxes, $2,000,000,000 in wages.

Why They Survived The railroads have survived and hold their place as a basic industry, still as important as its recent rival, the automobile, for these reasons:

1. The American public needed rapid transportation to develop this young and amazingly rich nation. The railroads were the answer.
2. Railroad's inventive genius constantly figured out ways to cut costs and increase safety and comfort. The first steel rails cost $218 a ton. The first steel rails cost $218 a ton. The first steel rails cost $218 a ton.
3. Railroad workers and management produced the genius and organization to operate the largest railroad network on the earth with speed and efficiency.

Solutions Proposed There have been three proposed to save the railroads. There are arguments against all three.

1. Voluntary consolidation, with government supervision over all transportation. Consolidation would eliminate the waste of duplicate lines and labor.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Members of the South Arkansas Highway association came to the Capitol Thursday to present their claims for roads before the State Highway Commission, but an apparent misunderstanding about the time of the engagement resulted in postponement of the conference until afternoon.

Association President L. L. Mitchell of Prescott said the conference had been set for 10 a. m., but the commission advised that the party would start at 1 p. m.

Mitchell told the visiting delegations, which he said represented 34 counties, "Something has happened that they can't hear us until 1 o'clock."

New Centennial Group

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The State Centennial Commission Thursday pledged financial assistance to provide exhibits at the 1939 New York World's Fair, the University of Arkansas-Santa Clara football game at San Francisco next October, and the American Legion national convention at Los Angeles next September.

Clyde E. Palmer of Texarkana, south Arkansas publisher, was elected as chairman, succeeding Harvey C. Couch who resigned.

Governor Bailey said Col. T. H. Burton, Eldorado industrialist, previously mentioned in connection with the chairmanship, had wired from New York a request that he not be considered.

When Apologizing Do It With Smile

Effective Apologies Have Four Essentials, Says Expert

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer
Apologizing pays—if you know how to go about it.

"When you've made a mistake," says John C. Burg, who's in charge of complaints for a large chain hotel, "rectify it at once. Otherwise, the bribe may grow into a very sore spot."

Effective apologies have four essentials, according to Mr. Burg. Promptness and brevity, some action to demonstrate your willingness to make up for the damage done. These are three. The fourth, and perhaps the most important, says Mr. Burg, is a pleasant, but positive approach throughout the procedure.

Plausibility in the apologist, he says, reflects insincerity or an inferiority complex that is as embarrassing to both parties.

Settings make a difference in the handling of apologies. In a formal dining-room, for instance, it's out of place to do anything besides make a prompt, formal apology. In an informal gathering joking may be an effective means of passing it off, providing the recipient of the apology understands the sincerity behind it.

Apologies, of course, play their part in business as well as in social life. The business man's jinx, says Mr. Burg is the perennial gripe: "There are two kinds of these."

"The first is the grouchy who 'sharpens his statement to thrust it home.' Often he is trying, in his blundering way, to help you. If you treat him with good humor you'll make a permanent customer—friendly of him."

The second is the one who naturally likes to be offensive. No amount of arguing can change him.

Autos Reduce Cost Of Warrant Serving

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—It doesn't cost as much to serve warrants in the great open spaces of Arizona these days, now that sheriff's deputies can use automobiles instead of horses to reach outlying localities.

Expenses of warrant serving in the old days would give modern budget makers a headache. In 1882, for instance, it cost Pima county $4,588 just for horses and men to outfit a posse of 50 deputies to "execute warrants on certain Apache Indians" who had strayed from the San Carlos reservation.

The bill also included: horse and mule blankets and saddles, $644.44; beef, $53.22; hardware, $67.50; drugs, $65.50; wages of Indian scouts, $210; and canteens, $33.60.

When Is a Chicken Not a Chicken?

SOME people object to the use of guinea pigs, or animals of any kind, for the purpose of scientific experimentation. More people object to the use of human beings as guinea pigs.

A what-is-it? has been developed which ought to make everybody happy. Whether it can be called a synthetic human or a synthetic chicken is something the congenial hair-splitter should have a picnic debating. There's no guinea pig in it, but, figuratively, life as a laboratory guinea pig is the career that has been carved out for it.

You produce it by grafting human tissue on a chicken embryo. It responds to bacterial and virulent infections in a manner highly similar to a living human being, and makes it possible to study at first hand many serious human diseases that could not be produced in an animal.

NO, it doesn't walk and talk and fight about politics. Right now it just sits around looking like something that has been dropped from a great height into a stone mixing bowl. But this is the question which obviously suggests itself whenever any kind of a what-is-it? pops up in a laboratory. Where do we go from here?

Suppose that the men who evolved the what-is-it? get to fooling around with that synthetic-human chicken some dull morning and come up with a new, improved model which... say... exhibits a tendency to break out into wild laughter at intervals, or tries to comb its hair. Are these experimental boys going to be content with what they have done then? Do you think so?

No. The next notion would be to develop the arms and the chicken feathers a little more, so that the thing could be made to sweep around the laboratory every morning.

It wouldn't be long before the improved model would be fooling around with grafting human tissue itself, and there's enough grafters in the world already.

No, boys, let it alone.

Land of Opportunity

HAVE a nice, bracing shot of today's special in the line of rejuvenating tonics: a west coast doctor, not a fat "technical adviser's" fee, the other day for demonstrating before a motion picture actress the correct way to appear to be dying.

It seems probable that this field of "technical advising" has been a kind of underground profession, or else it certainly would have been stocked with enough specialists by now to preclude the necessity of calling a man away from his regular work to fill in.

Golden is no word for the opportunities. What bright young man would like to step up and show some actress suffering from insomnia how to seem to be asleep? Or would instruction in the art of appearing to be taking a sun bath suit you better? Or how about giving the illusion of thinking far-away thoughts in an easy chair?

Don't think the development of this field would be of benefit only to the unemployed or the square pegs in the round holes. There's a crying need among actresses for proper instruction in a number of stunts similar to the ones already mentioned. Many can appear to be asleep, and still more can appear to be at least partly dead, but few can pretend convincingly to be merely pretending to be asleep or dead.

But instructors in the last two tricks would probably be a little harder to find. They involve pretty much effort.

Change of Climate Alone Does Not Mean Health

Most people have wrong ideas about the extent to which they can control all sorts of diseases and conditions by moving to a different climate.

It is now recognized that climate may be of value as one factor in the treatment of disease, but it is only one factor. There are many other factors that are of much more importance.

It used to be thought that people with tuberculosis had to go to a high and dry climate in order to be relieved of their condition. It has been suggested that people with rheumatism will invariably do better in a hot, dry climate. Certainly it is well established that some patients with hay fever get along better in certain parts of the country than in others, especially at certain seasons of the year.

The whole story of the relationship of climate to disease is a large one and it is not possible to tell the whole story even in the compass of a reasonably small book.

We now know that tuberculosis can be successfully treated in any climate and that the attention of a competent doctor, the services of a good sanatorium and a sufficient amount of rest and good food are much more important than the climatic factor alone.

We know that people with bronchitis, rheumatic conditions, diseases of the heart or other chronic diseases cannot expect to be cured of their disease merely by a change of climate because the disease is already well established and requires much more than climate for its control.

Sinus disease is of the same character. It represents an infection of the tissues which may have already brought about considerable changes in the tissues before a removal to a new climate is made. Nevertheless, there is also evidence that climate may be of great value.

Restraint Only Inspires a Runaway—Pleasant Home Will Cure Child's Wanderlust

(No. 70)
There is less trouble with little runaways today than there used to be. This is one good thing that has resulted from the traffic menace. Mothers are more concerned in knowing where their little folk are now, and small wanderers are trained to stay near home.

However, we still have the occasional adventurer with us. These brave little spirits must have some reason for shaking off home ties every day, or so, and edging around the corner to seek their fortunes.

I think the psychology of it is simple. They are tired of the same old things done in the same old way, and get a thrill out of new sights and sounds. A child will trail a dog, for example, if he loves dogs and is denied one himself. In one such case the dog disappeared the first day, but later the child was found repeatedly at the same place, where he had parted with his friend, because that place was associated with pleasant memories.

The cure, or attempted cure, for straying used to be putting to bed or tying. Now we know that such things only make matters worse. Our whole human set-up tends to the other extreme, when artificially restrained, restrained. We can sit in a room quite contentedly day after day reading or knitting, but let somebody say we are locked in and can't get out, and we instantly develop a phobia about freedom. How like the little child who is kept prisoner. So it is no cure, but rather a challenge to further adventure. Running away becomes a need.

Make Home Attractive
There is a great difference in children and some will want to see what is on the next street, while others are content to know only their own back yards.

The child who went to a certain grocery store when he got a chance, was just looking for another banana, such as the good man gave him. The child who just edges from step to step down the street and out of view finds it is lovely indeed to be free of mother's constant interference and telling. It is more fun to be alone and so it goes.

The whole answer is to make home more fun, better suited to the child's busy requirements. He must have toys to use his imagination on. He needs to have a pet of his own. He ought to have at least one kind companion for our runaways will seek new climates often, to escape the strain of older or bullying children. He needs more active play, and someone to help him plan ways to play.

He should be taken on little trips so he can be satisfied about the big world he insists on discovering. The daily walk is wholesome.

As for punishment, this is all right too provided our runaway knows what it is for and also provided it won't make him worse, for many a child is willing to take any punishment that comes, as long as he has a good time. He figures that his game is worth the candle.

WINS NATION-WIDE ACCEPTANCE

IN JUST ONE YEAR

Naturalube

THE NEW TYPE MOTOR OIL

ADDS POWER BY REMOVING CARBON STRONGER NATURAL FILM Saves REPAIRS

A motor oil must possess remarkable lubricating properties to win nationwide acceptance in just one year. These properties demonstrated in their own motors have won Lion Naturalube thousands of users from every section of the nation. The experience of motorists throughout the nation proves that you too can have greater motor efficiency and economy and a keener pleasure in driving your car when you switch to Lion Naturalube.

Lion Naturalube is the thickest motor oil you can buy, too. It has a stronger natural oil film which offers greater protection against friction wear—and the ability to remove hard carbon from pistons, rings, valves, and spark plugs—yet it is sold at less than premium price.

Because it possesses these unusual lubricating properties, Lion Naturalube offers savings five ways in the maintenance of your car.

FIRST, Lion Naturalube saves carbon cleaning and valve grinding because it penetrates into all parts of the motor and dissolves hard carbon deposits, which are blown out through the exhaust or washed away by the oil.

SECOND, Lion Naturalube saves unnecessary motor wear and repairs due to friction wear because it possesses a stronger natural protective oil film. This stronger film provides greater protection for motor parts with a margin of safety to spare.

THIRD, Lion Naturalube saves gasoline because it removes hard carbon, one of the chief causes of over-consumption of gasoline.

FOURTH, because of its uniform viscosity (body), and greater oiliness, Lion Naturalube increases motor efficiency and saves power.

FIFTH, Lion Naturalube saves on oil purchases because it lubricates better—yet costs less than other premium quality oils.

Lion Naturalube's phenomenal film strength and remarkable ability to remove hard carbon from pistons, rings, valves and spark plugs are natural characteristics. A pure, distilled motor oil, Lion Naturalube possesses these valuable lubricating properties because it is refined from a rare crude oil by Lion's special precision controlled process.

BUY LION NATURALUBE AND SAVE FIVE WAYS: A brief trial will definitely establish Lion Naturalube's ability to save money and improve performance. The next time you need motor oil, go to the Lion dealer in your neighborhood. Try Naturalube, then if you don't think it's the best oil you ever used, your money will be cheerfully refunded.

The Friday Music club will hold its regular quarterly evening meeting of 7:30 Friday evening at the home of Mrs. B. J. Ogden, on South Main street. Mrs. Ogden will discuss and present excerpts from the Opera Aida.

The John Cain chapter, D. A. R., held its April meeting with a 1 o'clock luncheon on Wednesday at the Hotel Barlow, with Mrs. A. L. Black and Mrs. Frank R. Johnson as hostesses. The members and their guests were seated at one round table, which included a "Thing of Beauty" with its central adornment a huge crystal bowl filled with lovely pink radishes, fringed with dainty sprays of Nadine leaves, with an occasional Dorothy Perkins rose accentuating the chosen color note of pink and green, which was completed with pink tapers burning in green holders. Each cover held a dainty corsage of "Baby Doll and Sweetheart" roses.

Mrs. Lawrence Boyd, who has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. M. H. Barlow, and other relatives for the past week, left Thursday for her home in Corpus Christi, Texas.

McFadden introduced Miss Eleanor Bonham, national field representative of Girl Scouts as her guest, and Miss Bonham told of the purpose of Girl Scouts, teaching them high standards of good leadership and citizenship and provide opportunities for camp and outdoor activities, calling attention to the fact that it was all in accord with the standards maintained by the D. A. R. Other guests introduced were Mrs. C. C. Spraggins and Mrs. Sid Henry. During the business period, the scholarship fund was discussed and placed in the national fund, and a budget committee was appointed by the regent. Silent Love Ends in Crime

Love led three Chicago deaf-mutes to a tragic end in a bizarre triangle that resulted in a murder attempt. Mrs. Sarah Wald, top, and Jack Glutser, lower left, were sweethearts before her marriage to Louis Wald, lower right. Throughout her marriage, the two remained sweethearts, they told police. Seven years after her wedding, she asked Wald for a divorce. He refused. Determined that nothing should stand in the way of their love, Glutser and Mrs. Wald made a murderous hammer attack on the husband, according to police. Physicians say the deaf-mute husband may not recover.

Dillon couldn't afford $2.50 for an Irish Sweepstakes ticket—the biggest lottery of them all; but he could always scrape up a dime for the lottery which certain ex-service men's organizations operated each week on Long Island. The grand prize was $1,000.
Dillon had been buying dime tickets for years. Surely he had spent enough on lotteries to have paid his $48 debt long ago. Somehow, though, it never occurred to him to pay 10 cents a week on his bills. Ten cents a week would be an insult to a creditor—much more of an insult than not paying anything. It is so that Dillon, and everyone else, I suppose, reasons.
Last week when they called the lucky number, it's Dillon's! One thousand dollars to the poor sign painter, for the man who is going blind, for the man who owes $48.
All who knew him were glad, of course. But they all said, "Dillon will drink it up. Dillon will go on a binge. A fellow like that would be better off without a thousand dollars."
The first thing Dillon did was to buy a barrel of beer. He sent it to the boys from whom he had bought the lottery ticket. It was a little token of appreciation.
When they tapped it and lifted their glasses in toast to him, Dillon drank water.
The next thing he did was to pay off that $48.
After that he bought two suits of clothes and a few other badly needed

Easter Cruise

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOYCE MILLER, heroine; she took the Easter Cruise.
DICK HAMILTON, hero; he bumped into the heroine.
JOHN GREORY, traveler; she caught a cold.
Yesterday five miles out of Port-au-Prince, hearing the last whistle of the Empress, Mr. Gregory remembered the importance of a silly bracelet.
CHAPTER XIV
"Do you think we should venture out of the city?" Mr. Gregory asked uncertainly. They were finishing their lunch at the British Club, and he seemed loath to leave its cool splendor and its conservative protection.
"Why not?" Joyce asked lightly. "We have plenty of time, and Dr. Gray remarked particularly that the drive to the Petionville Club was a worth-while sight."
"I agree," the road takes us through the jungle. He stood up, unwilling. "Well, if you really would like to go, we'd better start."
His tone conveyed the suggestion that she might say, "Oh, never mind, thank you," but she didn't say it. She wanted to go, fervently, if only for spite.
Their three faithful guides were waiting attentively for them. Mr. Gregory mentioned the Petionville Club to the driver, and he grinned in quick understanding.
In less than a few moments they were out in the country, climbing a mountain road which overlooked the harbor. Here and there tiny cottages dotted the scenery; makeshift affairs they were, some of narrow shafts of bamboo or sugar cane, some of odd bits of second-hand lumber, but all of them were white-washed in flashing elegance. Against the abundant background of tropical shrubbery they were quaint and picturesque.
Now the road, high up on a mountain-side, and they could see the Empress lying at anchor in the harbor, her white outline a dazzling contrast to the opalescent blues of sky and water. Below them, the city was a cluster of spotless white buildings, surrounded by a protecting forest of verdant hills.
At the club, they sat on a cool veranda which overlooked a colorful world of tropical splendor, and sipped frosted drinks from tall glasses. Here they saw other Americans, residents of Port-au-Prince, no doubt, and many officers, and representatives of various consular services. A native string orchestra played at intervals, delightful when it offered the

St. Paul Missionary Society Holds Session

The St. Paul Women's Missionary Society held its regular weekly meeting Tuesday afternoon April 19 at the church with 10 members present.
The opening song was "Whoever, Meaneth Me," followed with a prayer by Mrs. W. P. Wallace. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. L. L. Cowling called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. A very interesting talk was given by Mrs. B. F. Goodlett. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. W. P. Wallace who conducted the Bible study.
The closing hymn was sung followed with the benediction.

Railroad Crisis

costs, and keep buses, planes, etc., in fair competitive positions.
But who will pay off the investors in scrapped railroads? With few takers now, where are the railroads to find new investors to finance mergers? How about the communities that would be cut off from railroad connections? What are you going to do with the thousands of workers who would have to be discharged? And what if the railroads just won't consolidate?
2. Consolidation under government compulsion.
Here you have all the difficulties brought up in plan No. 1, and the added barrier of the Constitution, which says you can't deprive a man—meaning also a corporation—of his or its property without due process of law. An act of Congress is not necessarily due process—at least, not until the whole fight would be threshed out in the courts for several years.
3. Government ownership.
The railroads represent an investment, according to government figures, of some $25,000,000,000. The people, and corporations who now have their money in railroads would have to be paid if the government took them over. Part of this payment and the railroad debts as well would have to become a public debt, and the national budget is already carrying a depression burden.
Then, too, government ownership has never been a long-term paying investment in any country. The federal government sank something like a billion dollars into its operation of the railroads in this country during the World war.
Yes, the railroad crisis is still with garments. Altogether they cost less than $40. Next he bought supplies for his sign shop—cardboard and inks, and paint.

That was all. The rest of the money—more than $800—went into the bank. It is there today.
"You surprised us," his friends said. "We were sure you would go on a roaring spree."
Dillon smiled. "I only drank because I owed $48," he explained. "Now I do not owe $48, so why should I drink?"
It would be nice if every lottery winner could be half as smart as he.

gay and unusual melodies of the country, yet strangely ridiculous in its misguided attempts to interpret the popular swing music of the States.
"I wonder why none of the other passengers discovered this place," Mr. Gregory remarked.
"The women are never willing to stir off the main street," Joyce reminded him. "The minute they're off the ship, they swarm into the shops to bargain for all sorts of things they'd never buy at home. That's all they seem to go ashore for—to buy things."
"As a testimony, when they get home, that they were actually abroad."
It was nearly six when they left the club, and now the sun hung low over the farthest rim of the mountains. Night would fall quickly in the valley.
This time they did not have to search for their three musketeers; the boys were in front of the club, awaiting them expectantly.
"Big ship go soon," their interpreter reminded them, with an air of responsibility.
"Yes. We must go fast," Mr. Gregory settled himself beside Joyce. "Quarter past six," he noted, glancing at his watch. "We've plenty of time."
Presently the boy at the wheel bent forward, jiggled a few levers, and waited expectantly. There was a quick response to his efforts, the tune of the motor changed from a rumble to a deep threatening roar, accented by staccato back-firing. They were off, and soon going at the lightning pace of 50 miles per hour.
The car shook under the tremendous pressure, and in the back seat the customers were jolted about until their teeth chattered.
"Hey!" cried Mr. Gregory. "Wait a minute!"
The driver turned and smiled, mistaking the order for a compliment.
"Stop, I say! Stop!"
It was the motor which obeyed his command. It gave one deep spasmodic choke, followed by several puny put-put-put gasps; then, with a long whining sigh, it died out altogether. The three boys looked at each other in consternation. Mr. Gregory groaned.
"Sounds like we're out of gas," Joyce remarked woefully.
Their driver quickly disproved that theory by the old expedient of jacking a stick down into the tank to measure. It was half full. The other boys peered uncertainly beneath the hood, their black faces long in distress. Their magic wagon had stopped!
Mr. Gregory leaned his superior

STORIES IN STAMPS

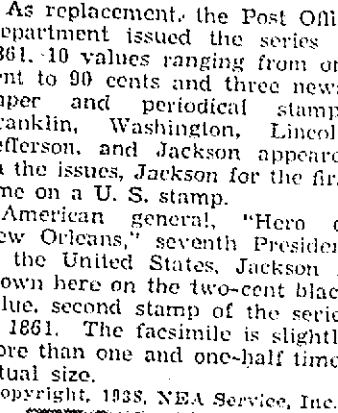

STAMPS CREATED BY CIVIL WAR

SCARCELY had the Civil War begun in 1861 with the firing on Fort Sumter when the federal government in Washington invalidated its postage issues of 1847 and 1851. Postmasters were given a reasonable time for return to the department of all stamps unused. Thereafter an order was issued declining longer to redeem them, since the Confederate States had adopted their use, confiscating the stamps whenever available.

As replacement, the Post Office Department issued the series of 1861, 10 values ranging from one cent to 90 cents and three newspaper and periodical stamps. Franklin, Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, and Jackson appeared on the issues, Jackson for the first time on a U. S. stamp.

American general, "Hero of New Orleans," seventh President of the United States, Jackson is shown here on the two-cent black value, second stamp of the series of 1861. The facsimile is slightly more than one and one-half times actual size.

DiMaggio Accepts Terms With Yanks

Hardhitting Outfielder Ends Holdout Siege—Plays for $25,000

NEW YORK — Back to the New York Yankees when they need him most comes Joe DiMaggio, the San Francisco outfielder who accepted the club's salary offer of $25,000 Wednesday after a holdout siege that would have lasted three months tomorrow.

DiMaggio ended his holdout with a telegram to Business Manager Edward G. Barrow and tonight was en route to join the club he helped lead to American League pennants and world championships in 1936 and 1937. The staggering Yankees need him. They have won only one of three games and their hitting has been puny.

DiMaggio capitulated to the terms offered by the Yankees with no promises of a bonus for a good season. Both Barrow and Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the club, were insistent on that point.

"His salary is $25,000, no more, no less," said Ruppert, who added he was "very glad to see he young man signed."

DiMaggio, traveling by train will be in New York Saturday morning and will be in uniform for the Yankees' game with the Washington Senators. No one knows whether he is in shape to play and manager Joe McCarthy will be the sole judge of that, Ruppert said. The club will dock him about $182 a day until he is in shape to play.

According to reports from the coast DiMaggio has worked out sporadically with the San Francisco Seals. He told reporters before leaving his home he was "tiring to go" and excited about getting back and rapping the ball again.

The move which ended the holdout was entirely DiMaggio's. The telegram to Barrow, which read "Your terms accepted. Leaving here at 3:40 p.m. Will arrive in New York at 7:30 a.m. Saturday," ended a holdout that had lasted since January 21.

The club's offer was $25,000. DiMaggio asked $35,000 and later upped his price to $40,000. Ruppert was firm and both sides settled down to a freeze out campaign. The club made no second offer.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, due to functional kidney disorders, may cause the cause of nagging backaches, rheumatism, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, graying of hair, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 16 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Hopewell club met at the home of Mrs. Charlie Hest Thursday, April 14 for its regular meeting. The meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. J. J. Sprudell. We sang our song for April "The Arkansas Traveler" and also rehearsed the Feb. and March songs. Miss Bullington told us of the very touching history of the song, "Believe Me, If all the Endearing Young Charms," and of the author Sir Thomas Moore. Our clothing leader, Mrs. Allen Martin was to have been in charge of the meeting. Am sorry to report she was absent on account of illness. The other leaders gave their reports. Our secretary, Mrs. G. W. Wiggins called the roll with 17 members present. One visitor and one new member, Mrs. Willie West. Miss Bullington gave an account of the county council meeting. The demonstration was given on making pine needle blankets and a mat which could be used so many ways to brighten up our homes. The recreational hour was spent in playing games carried on by the recreational leader, Mrs. Hare. Our hostess served refreshing drinks and cake. Our May meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Willie West.

TEST SHOWS VALUE OF COMPLETE FEED FOR GROWING BIRDS

Well-Developed Pullets Turn in $68 More Profit.

Gray Summit, Mo.—An old proverb laments that "one half of the world never knows how the other half lives." This is particularly true of growing pullets, as demonstrated in a test here at the Purina Experimental Farm last year.

Two hundred sturdy, well-developed six weeks old pullets were selected for the experiment. All birds were from the same hatch and for the first six weeks were fed on Purina Startena. At six weeks the two hundred pullets were as nearly alike as heredity, management, and good feeding could make them.

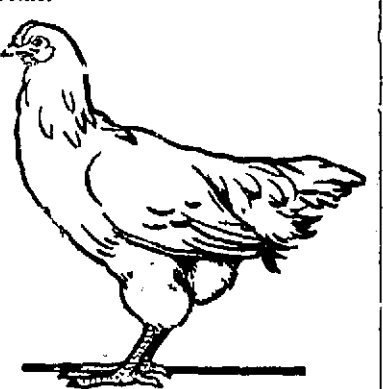

At six weeks the chicks were divided. One hundred birds were put into a pen and fed all the grain they could eat, along with the grasshoppers and bugs they picked up on alfalfa range. The other hundred were given all the grain they wanted nights and mornings, but in addition were given all the Purina growing mash they could eat. It was kept before them in open hoppers. These birds were also allowed alfalfa range. Management and housing conditions were the same for both flocks, and each flock was given the best sanitation.

Differences Show Early
"Almost immediately a slight difference in the development between the two flocks began to show," C. S. Johnson, manager of the Purina Poultry Department says, "but at

Well-developed pullet from the flock fed on complete growing mash. 5 months the most amazing differences were apparent. Birds fed on grain and Purina growing mash were mature, strong and sturdy, with well-developed egg-making organs and big frames. They were ready to go into the laying house and start turning out profitable, high-priced fall eggs.

The hundred birds fed on grain and allowed alfalfa range were under-sized and immature. Knotty and scrawny. Even though they had received the same starting mash as the hundred well-developed pullets, although management and housing had been the same, the ration the fully fed pullets received during the growing period had given them an advantage that could not be overcome.

Unprofitable, under-sized bird fed on grain and range.

At five months both the growing-mash fed pullets and the grain-fed pullets were put on the same laying ration. The pullets fed on growing mash responded immediately but the grain fed pullets did not. The "roughing" they had received from the sixth to the twentieth week held them back. Consequently, the hundred scrawny pullets did not come into production until they were 7½ months old, and by the time they were eight months old had laid only $6.50 worth of eggs.

Good Birds Turn in $74
The well-developed pullets grown out on a complete growing feed started laying at five months. Proper feeding during the growing period had given them big frames, strong muscles, and well-developed egg-making organs so that they were in peak condition to start laying. During the fall and early winter months when egg prices were high these birds were in good production and at the end of 8 months had turned in a record of $74.75 worth of eggs, or $68.25 more than the under-developed pullets. The hundred immature, knotty little pullets were an additional expense in that they used their laying ration as a growing feed after they were in the laying house. "Any poultryman who feels he can 'rough' his pullets through the summer is sure to find that they 'rough' him back in the fall when egg prices are high," Johnson says. "Grain and cheap mash, or grain alone, can't do a money-making job of growing and developing pullets into profitable layers. A half-way job of growing birds results in a half-way job of laying when they are put into the laying house."

Dizzy Dean Wins for Chicago Cubs

Makes Debut by Coasting To 10 to 4 Victory Over Cincinnati

CINCINNATI —(P)—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean's debut as a Chicago Cub was just a six-inning arm loosening chore for the former St. Louis Cardinal Thursday. Diz coasted to a 10-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on the impetus of a nine-run spurt in the second frame. It was the second straight win for Chicago over the Reds.

A crowd of 6552 turned out, most of them to watch Dean's performance but the second inning barrage of the Bruin batsmen stole the show. In that stanza two errors, a walk and 10 hits, including doubles by Demaree, Jorges and Harnett clinched the game for the Cubs.

Dean, after hitting a single to score Lazzari in the big second and then scoring from first on Jorges' double against the right field wall, was taken out at the end of the sixth. Manager Charlie Grimm said he did it to give

"Old Diz" a rest. During his six innings on the hill, Dean did not issue a walk, struck out three, and allowed eight hits. The three strikeouts came with two Reds on the sacks. Conker Triplett, Chicago's leftfielder up from Memphis where he led the Southern association in hitting last year, and Tony Lazzari, former Yankee and now part of Chicago's "Board of Strategy" topped the batters with four hits in five attempts.

Lee Grissom, left-hander counted on to win many games for Cincinnati this year, lasted only an inning. The Cubs pounded him for six straight hits in the second with none out. Barrett allowed four more hits before the Cubs were retired for the inning.
